F-R-E-E SPELLS “FREE”

Happy Holidays! And what's better than giving? It's getting FREE stuff from the web!

The first thing is FREE LONG DISTANCE using your PC to call someone.

It's totally free (myself and a few friends have used it). Go to <http://www.dialpad.com> and signup. They do ask a lengthy questionnaire but I thought it was worth it. All you need is a PC sound card, microphone, and speakers (although I recommend using headphones when talking or the person you called can hear themselves talking through your speakers back into the microphone).

How about something FREE for your PC? Here are a few sites to check out.

At <http://computingcentral.msn.com/topics/safecomputing/dblist.asp?ForumID=30> you will find MSN Computing Central for SAFE COMPUTING. Check out there free downloads.

Also, CA now has released its InoculateIT Personal Edition for free. Go to <http://antivirus.cai.com/> and download your free copy.

Check out http://www.answerquest.com/resources/res_shareware.htm for other places to download FREE software. I've been working up updating/expanding the resources on our website.

One of my favorite places to go for FREE STUFF is <http://freebies.about.com>, which has more than computer freebies. It has just about anything you could think of.

Just remember when filling out forms for FREEBIES that if they ask too many questions... don't do it. Be careful how much information you give to get something free from the Internet. Sometimes the information isn't used for anything but for the companies' marketing. Other times, you are added to a list to receive umpteen emails. Make sure also that you aren't signing up for unwanted newsletters.
